Desert Elephant Safari

In search of desert elephants – The range of desert-adapted elephants stretches along the courses of the Huab and Aba Huab rivers. Daily game drives set out in search of them, and guided tours offer guests a good chance of finding and observing the elephants. The gentle desert landscape and the opportunity to see desert elephants at close range make this one of Namibia's most impressive wildlife experiences.

Damaraland Triple

Twyfelfontein, Organ Pipes and Burnt Mountain

The guided tour starts at Twyfelfontein Adventure Camp and takes visitors in a lodge vehicle to three of the region's iconic sites. Twyfelfontein, Namibia's first UNESCO World Heritage Site, offers an insight into the millennia-old history of the San people through more than 2,000 rock engravings. At the Organ Pipes, closely packed basalt columns rise from the rock, their shape reminiscent of the pipes of an organ. At Burnt Mountain, dark, burnt-looking layers of rock shape the landscape and give the mountain its name.

Self-guided activities

Sundowner Deck – The camp itself has a sun-downer spot with stunning panoramic views, so there's no need for a long drive to another location. All guests are welcome to follow the steps up the hill and enjoy the sunset with a cool drink.

Petrified Forest – Around 45 minutes away by car lies a petrified forest, with the remains of enormous trees preserved in stone for millions of years.
